WE, the Undersigned Passengers who have arrised in this port by the Italian Bark" LOTHAIR." certify for the information of those that are interested in the trade that during the fifty-nine days of Navigation from Callao (Peru) to this port, we have on board the said vessel obtained all we wished and could be found on board a nailing ship. We have been very bealthy on board, and there was only one death, and that was a man who shipped i very bad health. The provisions and water were abundant and the treatment very courteous, therefore we can recommend this vessel and that she is also in perfect condition and very fast, and always preferable for this navigation.

Hongkong, December 8th, 1893. THE theory advanced by Mr. Regen in the case of Chung Cau Sai v. Chu Kum Ting, that Chinese marriages' cannot be recognised by the law of this colony, is rather a Chinese wife sued her husband for maintenance, but Mr. REECE, who appeared for macriage, being a polygamous one, was not recognisable by English law, and he therefore sued under an alleged agreement by which the defendant was stated to have undertaken to pay a certain sum monthly was adjourned to give the parties an opportunity of coming to settlement, and is therefore technically ed at the last hearing it would seem that there is not much likelihood of its on the news reaching that port. coming before the Court again. Under the circumstances, however, it would be improper at this stage to refer to the merits of the particular case even were those merits a matter of general interest; but the broad questions of the legality under English law of Chinese marriages, and of the rights of married women with regard style it affords the opportunity of listening f to property, are fairly open to discussion. With regard to the former, the proclamation issued in the name of the Queen 'securing the Chinese inhabitants i. Hongkong in the free exercise of their religious rites ceremonies, and social customs has always been understood, we' think, as covering their marriage customs, and therefore giving Chinese marriages a legal status. In the Straits Settlements Chinese produce belonging to a Foodhow man such marriages have been recognised by the Courts, as polygamous marriages are in .India, and in Hongkong also, if we are not mistaken, there are judgments on record giv. ing similar recognition. Mr. Reece went onto speak of the rights of married women in general, his remarks under this heading applying to both Buropeans and Chinese, and here, as it seems to us he was on firmer ground. The rights of married women in this Colony are of the slenderest description. As Mr. Regue says, "married " women in this Colony have no power of "contract with respect to separate property." "They have no power to sue their husbands. "There is no divorce jurisdiction in this

She cannot apply to the " magistrate, as at home, if deserted, for protection, and she cannot ask here for judicial separation and get an order for the payment of a weekly sum. Nor can she "obtain under any Act an order for maintenance simply on the ground that she is "descrited." It is to be hoped there are not many married women in the Colony consumed with a burning desire to prosecute their husbandsas roguesand vagabonds, but the condition of affairs above indicated is certainly an anomaly at the present day, when the rights of married women have been so largely extended in every other part of the Empire, "In the treaty ports of China British subjects are governed by British law, and at Canton, for instance, a married woman may hold separate property and deal with it as she JORDAN ALMONDS, NOUGAT, BUT. likes, but let her takes six hours' journey to Hongkong and become domiciled in this British colony and her property at once tial hardship arising from the restriction of balf. women's rights in this colony has ever been made public, but for the sake of preventing the possibility of such cises and of bringing our local law into harmony with that of Great Britain it would be well if legislation on this subject were undertaken.
